LANGUAGE AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES, ENGLISH:

GAIN STRONG COMPETENCIES IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS, CULTURE AND ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Functioning in a global job market requires knowledge about international politics, history, culture, and English language. It also requires intercultural understanding and the ability to take an ethical stance. You can get this background with the bachelor's degree programme in Language and International Studies, English (LISE), at Aalborg University (AAU).

The LISE programme prepares you to work with a range of international and global issues-, and gives you the opportunity to work in English throughout all semesters of the programme. The programme combines study in areas of international politics, international organisations and intercultural communication with advanced English skills, enabling you to perform a wide range of job functions nationally and internationally in public and private organisations.

LISE prepares you to continue your education within a number of master's programmes at AAU, in Europe and Scandinavia or elsewhere around the world. You will be able to apply to programmes focusing on international relations and politics as well as programmes focusing on international culture and communication.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR FURTHER STUDIES

Students choosing to take their master's at Aalborg University typically continue their studies in Culture, Communication and Globalization, the Masters in International Relations or Tourism. Many also take their master's degree at universities throughout Europe and beyond. LISE students have studied everything from international law to global humanitarian issues.

JOB AND CAREER: LISE prepares you for internationally oriented career paths

LISE provides a solid foundation for a number of internationally oriented career paths. These include public institutions (e.g., ministries or municipalities), humanitarian and development organisations and political or cultural analysis or communications work with private companies. The study features study abroad and AAU master's programmes include an internship semester. This helps connect with the type of organisation you would like to work within.

FROM FREDERIKKE JOHNSEN, SPECIAL ASSISTANT, UNITED NATIONS, LISE GRADUATE, 2018:

"At the heart of any job with the United Nations, lies a deep understanding of international relations and cultural diversity. Mastering these elements both theoretically and in practice is the key to success not just in your career but also in your personal development in any international organization. LISE gave me the theoretical foundation to thrive in my job in the UN, where I am in daily contact with state as well as non-state actors, and have colleagues from all over the world."

Application Deadlines: March 15, international students; July 5, general application.
